WASHINGTON NEWS.

Robeson Thinks it Time to Crush Whitthorne, of Tennessee,

And Delivers One of the Severest Attacks Ever Heard in the House.

Guiteau's Body, and What Has Been Done With It.

A SCENE IN THE HOUSE.

WASHINGTON, July 6.—There was an exciting scene in the house to-day while Robeson was engaged defending his administration of the navy department under Grant. The man who pursued Robeson most relentlessly during the 44th and 45th congress was Representative Whitthorne of Tennessee who was then chairman of the committee on naval affairs that exposed all the administration of the naval department. With wonderful patience Robeson has bottled his wrath for years, apparently waiting the time when he could strike a crushing blow. That time he imagined had arrived and he poured in hot shot at short range this morning. There was a full house and members paid the closest attention to his speech. He paced back and forth in the space before the speaker's desk, gesticulating fiercely, his voice rising from a hissing whisper to loud screams as he portrayed the character of the assaults made on himself and family. Pausing for a moment to face Whitthorne, who sat twenty-five feet distant, he began in parliamentary language one of the severest personal attacks ever heard on the floor. He did not mention Whitthorne by name, but alluded to him as "some one" or "person," covering his language so that Whitthorne could not directly take notice of it. Robeson said if there was then in that congress a man's character and daily life which rendered him objectionable to his congressional associates, if there was a man who was charged, whether true or false, with stealing the school fund of his state; such a man would be competent to demand a committee of investigation to pry into the private life of any man whose prominence made him a target for their attacks. He was proceeding by this species of innuendo to describe Whitthorne, when the latter left his seat and striding down the aisle toward where Robeson stood, his face pale with passion and clinched fist raised high above his head, shouted, "That is simply a lie, whoever tells it and repeats it." In an instant the greatest excitement prevailed. Members rose and gathered about the two in the space in front of the clerk's desk. Every one thought Whitthorne meant to strike Robeson, but the Tennessean satisfied himself with giving the lie he thus publicly and walked back to his seat. Robeson, apparently not noticing the attack, proceeded to repeat. "If there was a man who was charged, whether rightfully or not, with stealing the school fund of his state," when Peele, of Indiana, demanded that Whitthorne's words should be taken down. House, of Tennessee, on the democratic side, demanded that Robeson's charge should be taken down, to which Robeson replied: "I have made no charges. I have alluded to no one. If any man recognizes himself by the description, let him step forward and deny what I say." This caused loud and long continued applause from republicans, who gathered around Robeson as if to defend him. Some one on the democratic side called for order and the speaker began a vigorous pounding on his desk, which restored the house to order. Robeson then finished this portion of his speech, alluding to Whitthorne as a man so debased in his personal habits as to consider it a personal insult when the police made a raid on the lowest ruffians in his town; as a man who brought his brother to Washington and used his influence as a member of congress to obtain a contract for him from the government he despised; and allowing this man to be retained in office by the head of the department came on the floor of congress and struck at the reputation of his benefactor.

After Robeson finished his speech the bill was passed and Whitthorne rose to a personal explanation, denying charges made by Robeson and publicly branding him a thief and perjurer. Robeson said only a word in reply and the subject was dropped.

GUITEAU'S BODY.

WASHINGTON, July 6. The Evening Star says: "On Monday night a wagon drove from the jail into one of the alleys through which the rear of the army medical museum is reached. The wagon without doubt contained the body of Guiteau. At the army medical museum to-day none of the physicians or other officials would say anything about the whereabouts of Guiteau's body, or what would be done with it. Dr. Lamb said very decidedly, 'I don't know anything.' Before it was decided to bury the body in the jail, Warden Crocker had an understanding with Dr. Hicks that it should be removed to the army museum. Warden Crocker, when asked about this latest removal, seemed rather displeased that anything had been said concerning it. He said simply: 'If the body is not at the medical museum now, it will be there in a day or two.' The warden's intention is not to make the fact of the exhumation public for some weeks to come at least. Dr. Hicks was at the office of the registrar of wills, this morning, with the will of Guiteau, making inquiries as to proving it, etc. He did not file the document. The three physicians preparing a report of the autopsy on the body of Guiteau, had another conference this afternoon, with a prospect of finally agreeing on a report. Owing to some statements in the report some of the physicians are of the opinion that it had better be printed in a medical paper. The post mortem is reported to be unfit for publication, as it is simply a statement of facts which occur every time a man is hanged, and not published because well known."

WASHINGTON, July 6.—The Critic of this city will this afternoon state that Guiteau's skeleton is being boiled at the medical museum for the purpose of removing all flesh before articulation. An interview with an employe of the museum confirms the statement. He is himself engaged in the work.

LOWELL'S RESIGNATION DENIED.

WASHINGTON, July 6.—The statement that Minister Lowell has tendered his resignation is officially denied at the White House and also at the state department.

CONFIRMED.

Hezekiah G. Wells, of Michigan, presiding judge of the commissioners on Alabama claims; James H. Harlan, of Iowa, and Asa French, of Massachusetts, judges of the court of commissioners of Alabama claims; Daniel W. Fessenden, of Maine, clerk of the court of commissioners of Alabama claims.

LABOR REPRESENTATION.

WASHINGTON, July 6.—The United States senate, having directed an investigation of the relations existing between capital and labor, etc., the national federation of labor in this city recommends the labor unions in each congressional district in the country to send a representative to Washington to act as a member of the central committee on national legislation; and further recommends that at the first meeting under this call of central committee on national legislation, a directory of several members be chosen to represent the laboring men in the United States before the committees of congress.

THE GUITEAU AUTOPSY.

Dr. Lamb's Report as Published in the Medical Journal.

NEW YORK, July 6. The Medical Press of Philadelphia furnishes a special report of the post mortem examination of the body of Guiteau. The report is signed by D. S. Lamb and dated Army Medical Museum, Washington, July 4. The report is as follows:

By reason of delay, for which neither I nor my associates were responsible, the examination did not begin until 2.30 p. m. (one hour and a half after death), in consequence of which the photographing was less successful, and a cast impracticable. The body, which was of a faint yellowish tint, was that of a man about 5 feet 7 inches in height, and weighed one hundred and forty-five pounds. The eyes were examined by Dr. Loring, who reported the pupil slightly and equally dilated, the vitreous was cloudy and the fungus undistinguishable. The conjunctive of the left eye was congested. He repeated the examination two hours later and noticed an appearance of transverse fracture of the lenses. A small white scar directed obliquely downward, forward and to the left and continued to the skin was observed mid way between the top of the left ear and the median line of the head. The right parietal bone was slightly flattened over a space about two inches square just back of the front parietal suture, and to the right of the inter-parietal there was a slightly flattened elevation. On the corresponding internal surface of the calvaria frontal suture it was obliterated. The other was quite distinct. A number of depressions were observed near the groove of the longitudinal sinus. In thickness the skull expressed nothing remarkable. The membranes of the brain, firmly adhered to the anterior portion of the calvaria in the vicinity of the longitudinal sinus. There were adhesions of the dura also to the base of the skull. They were quite firm and situated in the several fossæ and most marked in deeper parts of the fossæ where also were small patches abruptly limited of immovable arborescent congestion, with however no attendant thickening or pigmentation. This stagnation was again most marked in the left anterior and middle fossæ. There was no congestion of the dura except at points just noted. The dura and pia-mater were adhered to each other and to the basin on both sides along a limited portion of the longitudinal fissure in the vicinity of the pacchionax granulations. The dura was slightly thickened along the longitudinal sinus, also slightly thickened and opaque along the portion of the line of the middle meningeal artery on each side. The arachnoid of the upper convexity of the brain presented in many places where it covered the sulci small patches of thickening and opacity. Elsewhere it was normal. The pia-mater was anæmic in the anterior. Posteriorly there was a slight hypostasis. The cerebral vessels appeared to be normal in all respects. The orbital plates were well arched and presented many conical eminences of large size. No roughening anywhere of the inner surface of the skull; brain firm; weight, including cerebrum pons and medulla and a portion of the dura, forty-nine and a half ounces. It was slightly flattened in the region corresponding to the flattening of the parietal bone above mentioned. On a section of the cerebrum was the appearance of a slight thinning of the gray cortex. A measurement taken, however, gave a depth of 1-16 to ¼ inches in close proximity to each other, while the substance was almost absolutely anæmic. The cerebellum and island of reil were both covered on each side. Fissures generally presented considerable depth in many places as in the right fissure of the rolando amounting to ¾ of an inch. The right fissure of the sylvius was typical of the left and separated from the first temporal fissure by a slight bridge deeply situated. The right fissure of the rolando did not connect with the fissure of the sylvius but was left separated only by a small bridge deeply situated. Both were separated from the longitudinal fissure. The first frontal fissure, on the right side was not connected with that of the rolando, but the posterior part was crossed by the secondary fissure. It was the same on the left side except that the fissure was crossed by a small bridge near the centre. The second and third frontal fissures presented nothing remarkable. There were numerous secondary fissures. The procental and retrocental fissures on each side were well defined and unconnected with other fissures. The intra parietal fissure on each side terminated in the transverse-occipital, separated only by a slight bridge. The parieto-occipital was well marked on each side. The transverse occipital fissure on the right side was ill-defined. It began on the median surface and extended well outward. The first temporal fissure was well developed on the right side. On the left it was not of the usual length. Wernicke's fissure was well marked on the left side, but not confluent. The calloso marginal fissure was double on each side, the upper of the two being probably the true one and on the right the upper one extended back to the anterior margin of paracentral lobule; on the left not so far. The lower one extended on the right side to a line about half an inch in front of the parieto-occipital, from which it was separated by a small bridge; on the left side also by a bridge of larger size.

The orbital surface—On the right side were seven fissures radiating from a circular fissure surrounding a small isolated convolution. On the left side were five fissures radiating from a small shallow depression. The left collateral fissure was well defined extending to the anterior extremity of the temporal lobe. The right was also well marked, but did not extend so far back as the other and there was an attempt at confluence anteriorly with the temporo-occipital, a small bridge intervening. The left temporo-occipital fissure was well defined. The convolutions following alone call for remarks. The ascending frontal was well defined on each side. The ascending parietal on the right side was well developed in its lower three fourths, but narrowed in the upper fourth. On the left side the narrowing was less marked. The island of reil presented on the right side five fissures and six straight gyri; on the left side seven fissures and eight straight gyri.

The usual median incision was made and the abdomen opened. There was extravasation of blood into the right pectoralis major muscle. Near the second rib was an adipose layer of one inch in thickness. The dome of the diaphragm extended up to the fourth rib. On each side were old pleuritic adhesions. At the apex of the right lung the upper and middle lobes were congenitally united by connective tissue. Lungs normal throughout. Also old pleuritic adhesions of the left lung to the diaphragm and between its lobes three small tubercles like the pigmented patches observed in the upper lobe. The heart weighed 10½ ounces. Its muscular substance apparently normal; abundance of fat upon its anterior surface and a villous patch of old pericarditis near the apex of the left ventricle. The right ventricle contained a little blood just forming a clot. Valves normal. The aorta was slightly atheromatous for a short distance above the valves. All of the abdominal viscera presented large accumulations of fat and were normally situated. The liver was congested. The gall bladder contained a little bile. The spleen was lobulated and enlarged. It weighed eighteen ounces. There was a capsule of a bluish substance at the crown of the malpighian bodies; hypertrophied pancreas normal. The stomach contained food. The intestines appeared normal; were not opened. Kidney congested; small supercicial serious cyst on the right one.

Notes. First, a considerable quantity of dark blood ran out of the heart on the separation of the heart and lungs. Second, Dr. Young states that the man was subject to malarial attacks while in the jail. Third, he had dinner about an hour and a half before the execution.

State News.

DENVER, July 6.—Kent, who killed Bennett at Leadville on the 4th, has been adjudged guilty of wilful murder.

The brick bosses held a meeting last night and passed resolutions not to accede to the demands of the striking brickmakers. There are 15,000,000 brick in the market and serious trouble is not apprehended.

Nothing further has been learned concerning the Indian trouble at Ignacio. Wise counsels probably prevailed.

Application was made to-day before Judge Elliott for the release of Wm. Brandon, who is serving ten years' sentence in the state penitentiary for rape on a 10-year-old girl last November. It has been discovered that the crime was committed during the time Colorado had no law for the punishment of criminals, as decreed by the supreme court in the Hirshburgh case. Judge Elliott ordered Brandon's release.

Fast Mail.

CHICAGO, July 6.—It is stated negotiations are in progress in the postoffice department and Washington roads by which it is proposed to carry through the plan of a fast mail between the Atlantic and Pacific, by a scheme differing from the one originally intended. This proposed arrangement is to connect with a train on the Lake Shore road, at Toledo, and make a run over the Wabash to Council Bluffs, by way of the Hannibal route, only thirty miles longer than the Chicago route, and it is believed the schedule intended for the latter can be made over it. The Omaha roads are becoming alarmed at the proposed change, as it will tend to create a new through passenger route, carrying those who would otherwise pass through Chicago and over that road

THE SCIOTO WRECK.

Every Hour Shows More People Missing.

And the Disaster Worse than First Supposed.

It is Thought the Victims are Over Seventy-Five.

WHEELING, July 6.—The scene at the wreck of the Scioto, to-day, almost beggars description. The anguish of those looking for their lost ones is added to the wails and sobs of those bending over the inanimate forms of their dead loved ones recovered from the water. The associated press reporter arrived at the scene at noon, at which time only nine bodies had been recovered. Both banks of the river were lined with people; making a crowd of perhaps 2,000 persons. The work of dragging in the vicinity for bodies is still going on.

William Mulholland, of Wellsville, Ohio, under whose auspices the excursion on the Scioto was given, said the boat took on about two hundred passengers at East Liverpool and two hundred and fifty at Wellsville. The boat was much crowded and refused to stop at other points where tickets had been sold. Taking his and other statements it is safe to say five hundred souls were on board at the time of the collision. Captain Smith, of Martin's ferry, who was on the John Lomas, says that when he was some distance from the Scioto he noticed that the boats were going to come together, and made preparations for the shock. Both steamers had on a full head of steam, the Lomas going at down rate speed, fifteen miles an hour, and the ascending Scioto at the rate of twelve miles an hour.

It seems to be the prevailing opinion that the collision was caused by a misunderstanding or confusion of signals.

MINGO JUNCTION, July 6.—There were found this morning the bodies of Charles Sweringer, of Kensington, Ohio; Dan. Thomas, the captain's son; C. P. Smith, of Wellsville; also a man by the name of Dunhamer, from Wellsville. About forty men came down with skiffs and a canoe from East Liverpool and are doing good work. By night they can recline about ten bodies more. A great many of the bodies are placed in the engine room and under the bow, and the want of the necessary apparatus prevents the workers from getting the bodies. Boats and grappling tools, diving bells, etc., are on their way from Pittsburgh and when the wreck is raised at least thirty to fifty bodies will be found. The missing are accumulating, and with what are found the dead will amount to 65 or 75. Nearly all will be found in and around the wreck. Every hour brings people here for their lost ones, and who give names not given heretofore. The dead so far have been recognized and moved promptly to their late homes.

STEUBENVILLE, O., July 5.—The following is the corrected list of the missing in the Scioto disaster: Wood Bailey, John Tomlinson, William Paul, John Christie, Eugene Farmer, G. C. Thompson, Lincoln Wright, Benjamin Stebbins, Stephen Kent, Michael Emrierling, Mrs. Michael Emrierling, David Frost, Chas. Leith, Charles S[illegible], Cit Thompson, M. E. Estiller and wife, James Newman, Willie Parell, Jacob Gibson and wife, Miss Dray and John Gronsal, all of East Liverpool; Arthur E. Hoagland, Mr. Hunter, C. B. Armstrong, W. Ewing, Millie Booth, Charles Davidson, Lewis Harper, John Stevenson, E. P. Smith and two children, of Wellsville; Cornelius Plummer, Washington, Pa. The total is thirty-five.

The bodies recovered are Evan P. Burke, Harry E. Beardmore, Miss Belle Brannon, Mollie Shields, David Fargo, Edward Thomas, Charles Sprague, Sallie Kiddy, Stewart Piper, James Conner, Lincoln Beardmore, Harry Donnelly, Edward Duffy, Edward Smith. Total, fourteen.

They are still hunting for bodies. The coroner of Jefferson county is on the ground, and will commence the inquest on the bodies to-morrow. Investigation by the government inspector will take place at Wheeling.

Another Kansas Tornado.

ATCHISON, July 6.—Yesterday evening Columbus, Kansas, was swept by a tornado with hail and rain accompaniment. Trees were uprooted, stacked grain scattered, corn cut down, all property touched by the wind laid to waste. J. P. Thomas' frame house was completely demolished. There were six persons in the house. The most severely injured was a small son, who may die. Mrs. A. Davis' kitchen was blown down and the side of the house blown in. She is sick abed and a child was badly hurt. Best & Sons' new mill was partly destroyed at Girard, and at Belknap much damage was done. Farms and lawns in Crawford county were visited at a much later hour. Grain was levelled. Peter Crawford and James Arrowsmith are reported dead and their families injured by being blown away.

Garfield Monument.

CLEVELAND, OHIO, July 6.—The incorporators of the Garfield national monument association held a meeting here to-day, with ex-President Hayes as chairman. A board of trustees was elected. About $120,000 have been contributed to the fund in all. The trustees held a meeting and elected officers.

The Situation in Egypt.

LONDON, July 6. A dispatch from Alexandria this afternoon states that Admiral Seymour has sent an ultimatum to the authorities to demand instant stoppage of the construction of earth works, under threat of opening fire. The work has ceased.

Rughel Pasha, president of the council, has received a telegram from the sultan that the British fleet would bombard the forts unless the work on them was stopped. The sultan holds the khedive and ministry responsible for the consequence. Rughel Pasha replied that the ministry had already telegraphed to Constantinople that demonstrations had been made in consequence of the sultan's telegram, and permission to resume work was asked. The work on the fortifications continues. Admiral Seymour delay's formally demanding a cessation of work until the British residents are taken on board vessels. They are now hastily embarking. It is reported Arabi Pasha is supplying arms to the natives.

ALEXANDRIA, July 6.—A Turkish yacht with two officers on board has arrived.

LONDON, July 6.—Egyptian securities closed firmer on the report that Turkey has agreed to enter the conference. In the commons Gladstone said he didn't intend to propose a vote of credit for warlike operations, such a measure not being now justified.

South Carolina Redistricting.

COLUMBIA, July 6.—The redistricting results in giving democrats five of the congressmen and republicans two. Republicans, however, hope to carry one of the five districts.

Train Robbers Captured.

POPLAR BLUFFS, Mo., July 6.—Part of a gang of train robbers was captured here yesterday. One, named Brown, who claims to be a member of five who were going to rob a train at Hendrickson station, on the Iron Mountain road, gave information which led to a sharp watch and two were taken, but the others escaped and are being pursued. Those captured refuse to give their names. All were armed.

A Determined Suicide.

CLEVELAND, July 6.—Lawrence Sharpensburg committed suicide at the infirmary last night by hanging. He is the same man who cut his throat and jumped from a rapidly moving train about a month ago. He also jumped from the third story window of the hospital recently.

IDAHO'S PRIDE.

The Great Wood River Country—A Mineral Region that is Attracting Much Attention.

Much has been said of late of the Wood River country, and as many are ignorant in regard to its location and resources we print the following interview taken from the Denver Times:

Brown as an Indian and looking as hardy as a pioneer, Mr. Robert E. Strahorn sat in his office at the Union depot this morning and told a Times reporter all about his seven weeks' trip through the Wood River country. He has traveled over every mile of this region, which is just now attracting more attention than any other mineral country in the west. He has staged it, covered it on horseback and walked over a good deal of it. He was in search of information, and anyone who has read Mr. Strahorn's books on the western territories can well believe that he found what he was looking for.

He had been over the ground several times previous to this trip, and was therefore familiar with the country through which he passed. There has been so much vague talk about the "Wood River country" that the Times is confident that the following facts in regard to the region, its resources and development will be read with interest.

This is what Mr. Strahorn told the Times man: "The Wood River country is in Central Idaho. It is 125 miles west of the Utah Northern railway, now the nearest railroad, but it will be reached by fall by a branch of the Oregon Short Line, now being pushed forward as fast as five thousand men can push it. It is unlike most mining regions in many ways. The mountains are not rugged; one can drive a wagon over any part of them. What is more noticeable than anything else to the Colorado miner is difference in the altitude between Wood river and the great camps of this state. There the altitude ranges from 6,500 to 7,000 feet. There is more snow there in the winter than there is in Colorado, but it is not so cold. Although this country was discovered three years ago yet it might be said that its history did not begin until last year. There are now about five thousand people there. Hailey and its vicinity has about 1,500; Belleyue and around about, 1,500; Ketchum and outskirts, 1,000. The remaining 1,000 are scattered along the rivers and gulches. It is unlike many mining countries in this respect: there are hundreds of veins of mineral. They are not big ones such as we find in Leadville, but there are more of them. There will be but little litigation on this account and the wealth of the country will not be gobbled up by a few. Stretching 150 miles north and south, and 50 miles east and west, the country is full of medium-sized veins. As I said before, although the country was discovered three years ago, the real development was not begun until last year—indeed, it might be said that it has not yet been commenced. The shipment last year was 1,000 tons of ore averaging 125 ounces of silver and 65 per cent. lead. In addition to this, 4,000 tons of ore were transported by wagon to Salt Lake, 300 miles distant, where it was doubtless reckoned in with Utah's shipment. This year there seems to be no doubt that the production will reach 10,000 tons of first-class ore. The shipments will be larger and easier owing to the railroad facilities that the country has acquired since last year. The scraping or surface mining is over. That was child's play. Capital and energy have now taken hold and they will see what can be found down in the bowels of the country. Several mines have recently changed hands at good figures. The "May Flower" sold for $375,000, the "Minnie Moore" will probably be sold for $400,000, and the "Muldoon" a few weeks ago was sold for $100,000. There are other mines that are now being worked with fine results, the "Bullion," "Jay Gould" and the "Idahoan." There are half a dozen smelters in operation and in process of completion. They are now adequate to the demands of the country. What is needed are smelting companies backed by capital. Small concerns, of course, can find plenty to do, but there is a rich opening for a smelting company that can put capital into its work. The capacity of the reduction works now in operation is about 300 tons daily. I met quite a number of Coloradans there, although not so many as I expected to. Pacific coast men are having things all their own way. This is somewhat remarkable when one considers the difficulty the Pacific coast people have in getting to Idaho. Denver should control the trade of that country, and can if she looks after it. I met Fred. Bradley, an old Colorado miner, well-known in Georgetown and Leadville. He is doing well there. So is Mr. Bennett, formerly of Georgetown. Wood river has other attractions besides its mining. The valley of the river, south of Hailey to the Snake river, a stretch of about seventy-five miles, is intensely rich in soil to be used for agricultural purposes. It is from one to five miles wide. But little of this land is taken up and there is room for a thousand families. The land is owned by the government. Ten miles west Camas prairie stretches out 90 miles long and 20 miles wide, watered by numerous streams from the mountains. It will make a glorious wheat field. It is now covered knee high with grass. The prairie got its name from the Camas Indians who subsist almost entirely upon the Camas root which they dig from the ground. The entire country is a happy combination of mineral, timber and agricultural lands. There is an abundance of water power. The Wood river is larger than the Platte at Denver, and is always full of water. Despite the natural supply of timber, lumber brings outrageously high prices, rough lumber costing from $40 to $50 per thousand, while brick bring from $15 to $18 per thousand. Brick men with capital can go to Hailey and make a fortune in a short time. There are machine shops needed in the town for making mining shoes, etc. Mechanics make from $4 to $8 per day, the latter price being paid for bricklayers and masons. Board at the best hotel costs $10 and $13 per week; second-class houses charge $7 to $8. Emigrants are now entering the Wood country at the rate of 200 per day."

Members of congress are calling each other scoundrels, liars and thieves with a frequency and regularity that is rapidly augmenting their reputation for veracity

The interest on the public debt of the United States will not be over $75 000 000 for the present fiscal year, about one half what it was fifteen years ago. This vast saving has been brought about by the improvement of public credit

Silver San Juan that has been waiting so long for a railroad in order that her inexhaustible mineral resources could be economically developed, can now go on with the beneficent work. The Denver & Rio Grande has been finished to Silverton

Cora L. V. Richmond, who comes very highly endorsed as an inspirational speaker by the late N P Willis and other high authorities, will lecture to-night on "Spiritualism What is it, and what does it do?" and on Sunday evening on "States and Conditions in Spirit Life"

Last Monday was the day fixed for the recommencement of operations by the smelter at Tin Cup. We have not yet learned the result. It was started last January, but was compelled to stop for want of lead ores. It is now well supplied with rich galena ore from the Silent Friend mine

Mrs Christiancy tried to decoy her husband into her room at Washington, a day or two since. The old man got as far as her chamber door, when he was taken with a rush of brains to the head, and beat a retreat. His first alliance with the treasury jade was his misfortune, a second, should it occur, would be his fault, and the grey haired old man would be beyond the pale of sympathy

The English house of lords has again refused to repeal the law prohibiting the marriage of widowers with the sisters of their deceased wives. This conservative body represents, in its course upon this question, a very small minority of the English people. Popular meetings are now being held in all parts of England in favor of the repeal

The bill for the relief of Ben Holliday, now before the senate, should be killed beyond resurrection. It is a swindle in every sense of the word. If the truth were known it would be found that Holliday owes the government large sums of money which he should be compelled to disgorge. The few remaining days of congress should be given to more important business than to that of allowing the twenty year old claims of unprincipled contractors

The Leadville and Pueblo papers have been indulging in the most vicious remarks respecting each other. After reading the terrible denunciations in their columns one would suppose that the bloody chasm was too wide to be bridged, but the Pueblo Chieftain, about which there is nothing small, has had the moral courage to come forward and make the amende honorable in the following noble words, which should be pasted in the hat of every citizen of Leadville "Leadville may have some 'cold furnaces,' but her revolvers are warm. Two men were killed up there on the Fourth, and the mortality at one time threatened to be much greater than this, but at the critical moment the city ran out of cartridges"

As the time approaches for congress to adjourn one is reminded of the wonderful change in the manner of doing things that has taken place within the past two centuries. In our day, when congress adjourns, the members pass resolutions, couched in hyperbolic panegyric, expressive of their feelings toward the speaker, and he, in tremulous tones, and with lachrymose cheeks, tells them how sorry he is to part from them. These things were done in a different way in old times. When Cromwell dissolved the long parliament he did it in these words "Go get you gone, ye venal slaves, begone. You have no more religion than my horse. Gold is your God. Who is there among you who would not like Esau sell his birthright for a mess of pottage, or like Judas betray his God for a few pieces of silver? Get you gone"

No sooner was Guiteau's body cool than it was sat upon by between 20 and 30 doctors, who "went for" it in a manner that completely eclipsed Bill Nye's attack on the heathen Chinee. In order that no time should be lost one of the surgeons took out the viscera, while another was working the skull cap to reach the brain. It was understood that nobody but the doctors were to be present, but after the work had proceeded for some time the attention of the doctors was attracted to a dapper little man who was making himself useful in a variety of ways and using words of learned length and thundering sound fresh from the latest medical dictionary. This suspicious character was summarily interviewed and was forced to acknowledge that he was a reporter for the Philadelphia Record. He was ejected in less time than it takes President Arthur to kick out a straight republican from a Virginia postoffice to make way for a readjuster. But he stayed long enough to give the world the above particulars

The people of Gunnison county very much fear that congress will adjourn without passing the reservation bill. While the neglect to do so would be little less than a calamity, we believe there is but little danger in the premises. We have private assurances that the bill will certainly be called up in a few days and that Colorado's representatives are all sanguine of its passage. The people of the whole state are vitally interested in the question and there appears to be no good reasons for laying it over until another session

John B Connor, the statistician of the Indiana State Bureau of Statistics reports that all the principal crops in that state are either equal to or above the average for the past ten years. The wheat crop will reach between forty five and fifty million bushels. The acreage shows an increase of two per cent above the average and the yield will be eight per cent above. Corn looks remarkably well and the crops will be heavy. The oat crop will be the largest harvested for many years. The condition of the crops in Indiana may be taken as representing that of the great grain belt of the country

The citizens of Raton met a few days ago and passed a series of strong resolutions declaring that no gambling establishment, public dance hall, or house of prostitution, should thereafter be allowed in that community. This action was rendered necessary by the outlawry that has for some time existed there, which has resulted in several murders and other outrages. We are glad to see that the citizens of Raton have the moral courage to attack the evils complained of in so determined a manner. Some other towns that we could mention would be greatly benefited by the adoption of a similar policy

There is little doubt but that Mr S B Axtell, who has been nominated by President Arthur for chief justice of New Mexico, is a very unfit man for the position. He was once governor of Utah and when, owing to his disgraceful conduct, the respectable people of that territory rose against him he was transferred to New Mexico. Charges were soon preferred against him there, and President Hayes after satisfying himself that they were true, at once removed him. Bribery and conspiracy to murder were among the charges that were sustained. Axtell's record is now undergoing a rigid examination in the senate and it is hardly likely that he will be confirmed by that body for an office that should be filled only by a man of the strictest integrity of character

Some time since the Philadelphia stock exchange appointed a committee to look into the standing of the large number of mining companies whose stocks had been listed and were dealt in by that body. The committee issued a circular calling upon all the companies to submit a statement of their condition on or before July 1, on pain of having their stocks stricken from the list. Very few companies have responded to the notice, and the exchange is in a quandary as to what should be done. It fears to strike the stocks from the list as the fall in values that will follow such action would be great and the losses will fall principally upon the thousands of innocent holders of the stocks of the delinquent companies. Although the time given the companies to report has elapsed nothing has thus far been done by the exchange in the direction of enforcing the penalty

The New York Mining Record, that has frequently classed Senator Hill among the monometallists of the senate, comes out with an ample apology in a well written leader, headed "Well Done A Faithful Representative," in which the following merited tribute to our senator occurs. "The people of Colorado may be congratulated in having sent, as their representative in the senate of the United States, one who from his place in that body on the 20th of June, delivered the most timely, complete, compact and triumphant demonstration of bi-metallism that has yet been achieved by any one in Congress. We say this of Senator Hill's masterly speech with all the more pleasure and unreserve, because in times past we have misjudged the senator and criticised his silence upon the same subject so far as to suggest that it proceeded from or was bottomed on a genuine hostility at heart, to that which he has now so masterfully shown to be the true monetary and industrial course for the country"

CHEVALIER HOFFMANN

Some Interesting Points in the History of a Remarkable Adventurer

A cable dispatch has announced the conviction at Vienna, of Karl Hoffmann, a notorious swindler. The London Standard gives the following account of the prisoner. The son of a glass dealer of Carlsbad, he commenced his career of fraud by representing himself as the nephew of Baron Hoffmann formerly an Austrian minister, from whom he had, he said, inherited the Wolfsberg estate in Carinthia. Pretending that he was about to build a branch railway from his estate, he succeeded in obtaining from some firms of contractors the sum of £25,000, of which £5,000 was paid by a Manchester railway plant company, now in liquidation. Another of Hoffmann's successful swindles was carried out at Glasgow, where he ordered a yacht worth £9 000 for the Crown Prince Rudolph, and another worth £16,000, for Prince (now King) Charles of Roumania. Hoffmann succeeded in obtaining £1,600 from the ship builders as commission on these orders. Among other feats in his subsequent career Hoffmann succeeded in getting appointed American consul in Warsaw. While he was staying there as a British subject with a British passport, he entered into a large contract with the Russian government for the erection of extensive works. At another time, while residing at St James' Lodge, Chapel place, London, he came out as the promoter of the Bohemian collieries company, with a capital of £100,000—a company which, needless to say, never owned an inch of soil in Bohemia. Shortly afterward Hoffmann turned up in Vienna again, where, besides several minor swindles, he also succeeded in defrauding a lady out of her town mansion, worth £20,000. At the court Hoffmann, pleading "Not guilty," pretended that he had a number of letters from the Prince of Wales, coming down to the latest date and written in the language of intimate friendship. The prisoner is described as a Roman Catholic, forty two years of age, and separated from his wife. He is of tall figure, with a bronzed face and of "elegant manners and appearance." The past four months he has spent in prison while inquiries were being made, and because the evidence against him had to be collected from London, Berlin, St Petersburg and other European capitals. There were over forty witnesses to be examined against him, including gentlemen from Rothschild's and other eminent banking houses

After the long indictment had been got through the prisoner read out a document justifying himself. He said the first bankers in the world had dealt with him. The firm of Pereire had credited him with 40,000 000 roubles. He had contracted loans for the Russian government as well as for Portugal and for Turkey. He had received the gold medal for art and science from the king of Prussia's own hand. He had been commissioned by the Russian government to build barracks and fortifications for them to the value of 84 000 000 roubles, but he had refused to do so out of patriotism as an Austrian subject. He attributed the whole of the case that had been gotten up against him to the Berlin police, who believe him to be the head of a Catholic revolutionary party, who wanted to seize the German emperor and carry him off into captivity. At the conclusion of the prisoner's statement which contained many more things of the same kind he was cross-examined. He had only once he said called himself Baron Hoffmann but people afterward persisted in giving him that title. Since 1860, he continued he had been naturalized in Scotland and, therefore, had an English passport. All the orders he had worn had really been presented to him, except the cross of the Legion of Honor which had somehow come into his possession by mistake. He had claimed 100 000 marks compensation through the English ambassador for his arrest in Berlin but his losses owing to that arrest had been greater. Several police notes and documents were then read including the American ambassador's letter to Hoffmann, announcing his nomination as American consul at Warsaw. This nomination was afterward canceled by the senate, but his name, by mistake continued to appear in the official American consular list. A note of Prince Bismarck's private secretary followed, declaring that the prince never saw Hoffmann whereupon the accused said he spoke several times with the German chancellor at Regierungsrath Wagener's house. The police notes state that Hoffmann ill treated his first wife and without being divorced from her, had commenced negotiations for a marriage with a rich American lady. A London police note states Hoffmann obtained an English passport under the pretense of being an English physician's son. He had left debts behind him in London and swindled an Englishman out of £300. He had represented himself as proprietor of Bohemian coal mines started a joint stock company, and had had business connections with Mr Albert Grant. Both the Berlin and London police notes designate Hoffmann as a dangerous chevalier d'industrie. He was sentenced to seven years' imprisonment with hard labor

A PEST OF RABBITS

The Island of New Zealand Overrun by Them to the Destruction of Sheep Farms

The Gentleman's Magazine

New Zealand has suffered grievously from the ravages of these greatest furry foes. About twenty years ago a colonist brought seven rabbits from the old country to his new home at Invercargill, in the Southern Isle. It was thought to turn these adrift on the bleak sand hills along the coast could not fail to prove a benefit to the colony. For some years this answered capitally, and the colonists enjoyed excellent shooting on the links (as such a seaboard is called in Scotland). But ere long the rabbits increased to such an extent that they cropped every blade of grass and even devoured the roots which alone bound the light sand hills and prevented them from blowing over the better soil inland. Very soon this evil occurred, and the land was greatly injured. Then the farmers on the seacoast began shooting and trapping in earnest, but by this time some more rabbits had been imported to Otag, and from these two centers the mischief rapidly spread. Considering that each rabbit breeds about eight times a year, and produces an average of six young at each litter, it is easy to see how rapid must be their increase. On the other hand their foes are few, the settlers in the interior living eight or ten miles apart a lonely life, in truth, where a half dozen men herd the flocks which range over fifty thousand acres. It became evident that these shepherds could never check the progress of the evil without assistance, so men were hired to ferret, trap, shoot or worry the invaders. These men traveled with large packs of dogs, numbering from one to two dozen. They were paid at the rate of 2d a skin. It was, however, soon found that the sale of skins fetched less than they cost, while the presence of strange dogs disturbed the sheep and often resulted in their being worried. The sheep-runs being in general tracts of crown land, merely rented by the farmer for a limited term of years for the purpose of rearing stock, it was found in many cases not to be worth the expense of attempting to cope with the mischief. One cure after another was tried, such as stopping the burrows with cotton waste saturated in bisulphide of carbon, but all were successively given up as useless efforts to meet so widespread an evil. In many cases it was found that the land could no longer support one-fourth of its former number of sheep, so the holders were absolutely compelled to throw up their leases and abandon their runs. The extent of the ravages could hardly be credited were it not for the cut-and-dry statistics of the Rabbit Nuisance committee. I may quote a few extracts from the evidence of many gentlemen owning large sheep-runs in the province of Otago and South Canterbury. Many begin by stating how incredulous they were at first that rabbits would ever take to the new country sufficiently to afford them sport. All too quickly their eyes were opened. For instance, in South Canterbury, Messrs Cargill and Anderson killed fifty thousand rabbits by poison a year ago, but in the following spring their sheep-run was just as densely peopled by them as though not one had perished. Mr Kitchen states that he kept nearly a hundred men working as rabbit-killers for four months, and succeeded in clearing his land. Now they are worse than ever. Mr. Roos says that he killed 180,000 last year, and his employer, Mr. R Campbell, expended £3,000 in one year in attempting to keep down the pest on his runs of 168,000 acres. Still the plague spreads, and the whole land from Wartaki to Foveaux strait is more or less infested with rabbits. Many districts are just a vast warren, on which it is impossible to keep sheep at all. Mr R Campbell alone has been compelled to abandon 250,000 acres. Chiefly in Southland and Wallace counties, and on the North Maria lake and Greenstone valley several other sheep farmers have also been forced to abandon runs of from 15,000 to 16,000 acres. Many estates, though less seriously injured than these, have still suffered so greatly that their value is immensely deteriorated. Eight runs which formally brought in a rental of £1,000 per annum, now let for £170. The Burwood run is instanced as one which used to carry 80,000 sheep, but now barely provides food for 24 000. In 1878 the total number of sheep in colony was upward of 13,000 000. In 1879 it was reduced to about 11,500,000, and this decrease, though now considerably checked, has continued. The loss on the exports of wool and tallow is estimated at £500,000 per annum. On the other hand, in 1879, there were exported from New Zealand upward of 5,000,000 rabbit skins valued £46,770 and in the following year upward of 7,000,000 rabbit skins sold for £60,970

A Wandering Dentist and Wonderful Teeth

Siberian Correspondence New York Herald

One of the most interesting exiles I met in Irkutsk was, as you may be surprised to learn, an American, but a voluntary one, an American dentist, Dr Ledyard, who, with his wife and child, arrived only a month or two ago from China, intending to make a home and a fortune for himself in Eastern Siberia. But I am afraid the doctor will not stay long on the Angara, having inherited too irrepressible a desire to travel from his ancestors to think of settling anywhere for a long time together. Dr Ledyard, who hails from the Pacific slope (San Jose, I think) is the grandson of one of Captain Cook's officers, John Ledyard, who had the most romantic enthusiasm for adventure of any man of his time. He conceived the project of travelling across Europe, Asia and America as far as possible on foot, and to this end set out from London, with some $250 in his pocket. He reached Yakutsk, where he met Captain Billings, an Englishman, who, after sailing with Cook, was employed by the Empress Catharine II, to make discoveries on the northeast coast of Siberia and among the islands in the Eastern ocean stretching to the American coast. At Yakutsk, however, Ledyard was arrested on suspicion of being a French spy, and was sent back under escort to Europe. Afterward he was commissioned by the London Geographical society to make explorations in Africa. Dr Ledyard, his descendant, is an inveterate wanderer, too, and I trust that before he leaves Eastern Siberia he will make the journey up the Lena, as I have just done, to Yakutsk and make a special study of the wonderful teeth of the Yakuts he will see along the road, and tell the world the reason why this aboriginal race can boast of the most beautiful teeth in all the wide world. Three hundred versts from Yakutsk I have seen old men of sixty and seventy with sets of teeth small and pearly, white and polished, and healthy as those of the handsomest American girl of sixteen. Decay and suffering and unsightliness are losses actually unknown. A physician of Yakutsk tells me that he believes the reason of this phenomenon is to be found in the habits, and the kind of food eaten by the natives, as well as to a certain care taken by them from childhood up. In the first place the Yakuts do not touch sugar in any form, for the simple reason that they can not afford to purchase it. Secondly they are in the habit of drinking daily large quantities of fermented stir milk summer and winter which is an anti-scorbutic and is very beneficial in preserving the teeth. And lastly they have the habit of chewing a preparation of the resin of the fir tree, a piece of which, tasting like tar they masticate after every meal, in order specially to clean the teeth and gums of particles of food that may remain after meals. The gum or resin is prepared and sold by all apothecaries in Siberia, and is much used by Russian ladies. The fermented milk is said to be a not very savory drink. First the milk is cooked—and then put into a large vase-shaped utensil made of frozen cows' dung, in which it is allowed to ferment until the winter when it is broken up into blocks and preserved for use in the cellars all the year round. Now if Dr Ledyard would make an exhaustive study on this subject, and publish the results of his observation, he would confer a lasting benefit on suffering humanity

Is located in William's Canon, one mile north from the Mineral Springs in Manitou.

There is no more pleasing or grand sight in Colorado and you miss a wonderful scene if you fail to see it.

There are large stalactites and grand old stalagmites with the most delicate and beautiful flowers. The sight of one room and grotto of the flower of alabaster is worth infinitely more than the expense and trouble of visiting the cave

There are many rooms for you to visit, among which are Cascade, Canopy, Cathedral and Music Halls, Alabaster Grotto and the famous Bridal Chamber

The air is pure and there is no water to injure the clothing. Wraps and habits furnished and attentive guides. Come and see us

We make a specialty of fine watch repairing, and by the aid of machinery we can make any part of a watch damaged by an incompetent workman, as good as new. All we ask is a trial to convince you that we can do as we say. Bring all your fine and complicated watches to us, and don't run the risk of having them spoiled by inexperienced workmen. The annual meeting of the J. M. Sigafus hose company for the election of officers will be held to-night.

Mr. A. R. Baur will occupy one of the new store rooms in the Orgel block as a confectionery store and an ice cream saloon.

There will be meeting of Co. A at the armory to-night for the transaction of important business. A full attendance of the members is desired.

Mrs. Cora L. V. Richmond will deliver a lecture in Court House hall to-night. Subject, "Spiritualism—what is it? and what can it do?"

It is fully determined that Kent will return to Colorado Springs and take his old position as pitcher in the Reds. Now that Newman is gone he will be badly needed.

Mr. C. G. Sherman has a hen's egg measuring seven inches one way and nine the other and weighing 5½ ounces. At last accounts the mother of it was doing well under the circumstances.

Remember that all of the entries for 125 yard handicap for the Metcalf medal must be made by noon to-day. The contest will take place at the association grounds to-morrow afternoon.

Mr. John W. McKinney, the advance agent of M. B. Curtis' Sam'l of Posen company, was in the city yesterday. The company is now playing at Denver to large houses and will be here on July 15.

Mr. C. E. Aekin received a live mountain lion from Springer, New Mexico, yesterday. The lion is about six months old and very tame, and is now on exhibition at Aiken's museum on Pike's Peak avenue.

Mr. Ed. Newman left yesterday for his home in Nebraska City, Nebraska. Ed. left just as he was most needed by the Reds for a change pitcher, he having proved so successful in his delivery at Leadville.

A meeting of the trustees of the Home for Friendless Children was held in the Y. M. C. A. rooms yesterday afternoon for the transaction of regular business. The report of the matron showed the home to be in a very satisfactory condition.

After o'clock yesterday morning the funeral of Mr. Joseph Kenyon took place from Grace Episcopal church. Messrs. F. E. Robinson, A. Sutton, Matt France, D. J. Martin, G. S. Barnes, T. Tribe, Ainsworth Brown and H. A. Wagner acted as pall bearers. The remains were buried at Evergreen cemetery.

Captain M. L. DeCoursey has again sold Cheyenne cañon, the New York gentlemen who purchased it last year having concluded that they did not want to go to the expense of improving it as they contemplated doing. The new purchaser contemplates making some improvements and making the cañon attractive for sight seers and tourists.

A horse was stolen from Isaac Hopkins, a ranchman residing near Monument, on the night of June 22d. The animal was recovered in Denver the next day, and it was ascertained that the thief had driven him from the ranch to Denver, a distance of forty-eight miles, in two hours and fifty-four seconds, thus developing the fact that the horse is more than ordinarily sound and speedy.

Postmaster Price has discontinued the practice of placing due bills in the boxes at the postoffice at the expiration of each quarter. He has, however, placed notices in conspicuous places in the office notifying renters that the quarter expired on July 1st and all box rents must be paid by July 10th. After that date those not having paid their box rent will find their mail in the general delivery.

According to reports of the Fourth of July game of ball published in the Leadville papers, it would appear that the Reds were entirely out-played. Wait until the Blues visit Colorado Springs again and they will find out they do not play ball much after all. Had W. R. Peery, "the prince of umpires," as the Herald calls him, umpired the game in this city on the first test, the Blues would have been vanquished by a score differing but little from the one at Leadville.

The second open air concert under the auspices of the First Regiment Cavalry band will be given in Alamo square to-night at 8 o'clock. INVALIDS AND TOURISTS.

The Seven Lakes Hotel is Now Open.

It is the highest hotel of the kind in the world, and in the highest forest.

The principal lake is eighty feet deep and one mile in diameter; is the highest in the world, being 11,432 feet above tide water.—[Report of the U. S. Signal Service.]

It has the highest mail boats in the world.

"The road via Cheyenne cañon and Beaver park to Pike's Peak, about 13,000 feet, is the highest carriage road in the world, and the volcanic crater, within which are the hotel and lakes, is the highest and largest in the world. It does not militate against the crater that it has but one opening."—[Chancellor of the Kansas State University.

Professor Spring, says: "The scenery is extraordinary; sublime, beyond description."

Said the pyrotechnist who made the fire works for the grand Masonic celebration in Chicago: "I never felt so near the Great White Throne as when beholding these stupendous remains of God Almighty's fire works."

Rev. H. C. Crane, says: "Along the Cheyenne road and at the lakes, the views are glorious. By the old lake-bed, over 13,000 feet in the air, I found many precious crystals. I have never felt so happy since my marriage day."

Rev. Mrs. Crane: "All this, and heaven too."

Bierstadt, the Rocky Mountain artist: "I never grow weary looking at it. It changes every hour. Cheyenne mountain, over the very crest of which runs the road of the lakes and Pike's Peak, is the only mountain in the world which rises without a base. From the prairies it boldly springs up 4,000 feet."

Various journals, notably the Atlantic Monthly, and "H. H.," speak kindly of the house, lake and road.

"Oh, for some kind friend to kick me up another hill," said Mark Twain, before the road was made.

The water, or highly developed air, ozone (progressed oxygen), or both, cures many diseases. Exhaustion, nervousness, and every symptom of paralysis, at once disappear. So with many lung and heart troubles.

The hotel is four miles from Pike's Peak (official survey), and the carriage road three miles thereafter.

Everything in hostlery, guides, couriers, horses, burros, tents, lunches, etc., furnished at reasonable rates.

A few cottages at or near the Peak timber line.

An abundance of goat's or cow's milk for invalids.

Carriages furnished as guests require.

Regular stage line Tuesdays, Thursdays and Saturdays.
